MISSION

CHDI's mission is to partner with communities, members of the University of Wisconsin Carbone Cancer Center (UWCCC) and other UW faculty to reduce inequities in cancer burden through research, outreach and education.

RESEARCH COLLABORATION

We work with UWCCC members, other UW faculty, and community organizations to conduct collaborative research on cancer health disparities:

- engaging community organizations and forming partnerships,
- developing research designs,
- writing grant proposals,
- implementing community-based research, and
- preparing publications.

FEE STRUCTURE

Community Organizations: Services to community non-profits are provided without charge with UWCCC support. CHDI seeks financial support when it partners with a community organization in implementing an externally funded project.

Faculty Partners: CHDI relies on consulting fees and percent salary support on grants to help cover the cost of its services. Costs are negotiated prior to developing a contract and depend on the staff and project time required. Rates are reduced for UWCCC members.
